How well does manga such as Naruto represent today's Japanese society? Through the drawings and texts of manga, we will discover what is behind it, and how the Japanese superhero is different from the American. And we will try to understand why shōnen manga are so popular outside Japan's borders.

Dr. Valérie Harvey is a sociologist and teacher of 'Les mangas et la société japonaise' at Université du Québec en Outaouais.

The lecture will be in English and the Q&A will accept questions in French, English and Japanese.
